Embezzlement- The person in charge of payroll and a very important company added his wife and two daughters to the payroll, even though they aren't employees. After making the check out to his family, he takes the checks and pockets the money. To prevent embezzlement the company that hires people to be in charge of payroll could check behind the employees.

Forgery- John received his report card on Friday and he was failing three classes. rather than doing the responsible thing and showing his mom, he decided to forge her signature and return it back to his teacher on Monday. To prevent forgery Johns teacher could compare signatures from previous report cards or even call his mother to ensure it was her signature.

Shoplifting- Madison's mother told her she couldn't have any candy, but she really wanted some candy for school. Since she really wanted the candy she decided to steal the candy since her mother wouldn't buy it. After her mother walked around the corner to another aisle, she slipped the candy into her jacket and heard someone tell her to put that back. It was an employee who caught her attempting to steal the candy. Her mother came around the corner with a look of disgust and disappointment on her face. After Madison was caught trying to steal candy she was grounded for three months. To prevent other attempts at shoplifting the store could install security cameras and security sensors.
